The Value of Silence

A friend asked how I shut out "the world" from my life to hear the voice of God. My secret is simple. Most of the time, our home is a place of silence. We've made it that way intentionally.

Silence makes some people uncomfortable. It's in silence that the voices in our mind are most clearly heard. Voices that sometimes say things we'd rather not hear.

Some people live in a noisy environment to drown out those voices. The problem is that the same silence which allows those voices to be heard also allows you to hear the voice of God. If you immerse yourself in noise to shut out one voice, you shut out the other.

The solution isn't to create a noisy environment, but to address the voices that say things you don't want to hear. It's your mind after all.

If the voices are demonic, you should consider evicting them. If they're wounded parts of your soul, you might consider emotional healing.

After you've dealt with the voices that create chaos, the voice of God will become more distinct and you'll relish those times of silence with Him.

If you're looking for help with emotional healing, you might check out my book Emotional Healing in 3 Easy Steps.
