

Radiance

You have been asleep and realise you are dreaming...or so you thought.

But it is more than that. You realise from reading other's experiences that you are having a trance.

You are in what seems like an amphitheatre, but it is so large you cannot see where it starts or where it finishes.

You look up into the starry heavens. They have never looked so, so close before. The stars seem to have taken on personalities. The closest stars to you have a warmth to them. It is as if they want to speak to you.

When you look around you there are multitudes upon multitudes on both sides of you. They are dressed in extravagant garments of incredible colour, beauty and variety. It is as if they are from many different cultures and from many nations.

You are amazed that they are all looking at you and beckoning you to go forward, go forward to the light.

The light is way far away but as you move toward it, it seems to come towards you.

You have never experienced anything like this before. Your eyes have become accustomed, somehow, to be able to look into the light. It pulsates.

It comes upon you in waves. Wave after wave. You feel exhilarated beyond life itself. Your whole being has become so alive. It is as if you are flying, flying towards the light.

As you approach the source of the light, you understand that it is He, Jesus. He is the source of the light. You do not feel afraid because you love Him. The light wraps around you in love. You have never felt so loved before. Your heart wants to explode within you because of this love you feel.

You can now see the outline of his face. There is a smile upon his lips. His eyes are like two pools of sparkling clear blue water. How can they be so, so blue you think.

He beckons you to come to Him. You do. He puts his right arm over your shoulder and indicates that you are to walk with Him.

When you awake you realise you have been in the presence of the King.
