

3 Reasons Why First Impressions Matter

(Summary of Lance Wallnau's article "You've got 30 seconds...")¹

VIDEO: player.vimeo.com/video/179781935

When you meet people you instantly form an idea, a perception, of them. Those who meet you also operate this way.

Here's 3 reasons why it matters what others think of you:

1) Favour

When God guides you to a new acquaintance and they look at you, they will associate you with someone or something positive. That's when the favour touches your connection.

"Favor is like a divine covering and makes a powerful first impression."

2) The Law of Attraction

Draw around yourself people whom resonate with the vision you carry. When you do this you will be moving with the flow of the Kingdom. Those who are ideal for you will pick up on your presence and connect with you. These are God's divine appointments for you – not a chance happening. A series of divine moves will bring this about.

"When you run into the right person at the right time you are tapping into a field of cause and effect in an unseen realm."

3) Discernment

Often when you meet with people discernment is given to reveal the true motivations of a person's heart. This may happen through thoughts of a friend or foe from the past. These memories confirm what you may be feeling.

"If you personally fail in making a good impression, it takes twenty subsequent interactions to alter or reframe someone's original perception of who you are. Sometimes the initial interaction frames a permanent wrong impression."

Read the article for yourself to get the full impact

Laurence

15-9-2016

(www.CanberraForerunners.org)

COPYRIGHT

Quotes are copyright to respective authors

This document is free to copy, republish and distribute, but only 'as is'. It is free to quote from at length.

All Canberra Forerunners' documents are licensed under

Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial-NoDerivs 3.0 Unported License