THE FIVE POINTS OF HOW TO INTERPRET THE BIBLE

- № 1 The intended meaning of the original writer, and relevance to the original readers, are the most important starting points for understanding a passage.
- № 2 A verse cannot be interpreted to mean what it never could have meant to the original writer or reader.
- № 3 Specific attributes of the faith cannot be used as an interpretive lens without harming the text, such as trying to insert Grace, Faith, the Supernatural, the Cross, etc. into every passage.
- № 4 The original wording, grammar, and language of the author's time period is invaluable for understanding the meaning of a text.
- № 5 Knowing the historical setting is essential. One must ask contextualizing questions of the text such as: Which covenant was the writer operating under? Who was the political ruler at the time? Where was the writer located? The reader?
