MENTORING OTHERS

11-"They Just Don't Want to Know"

(This is a mentoring article)

Recently I had the following email discourse with a person I'm mentoring overseas. The content is relevant for all those who wish to spread the word about the critical nature of the Kingdom NOW.

Statement: "I am starting to see a pattern when I engage people about Kingdom living. They seem to appreciate what I'm saying, but at the same time, they don't seem to get it. They want to 'cherry pick'. Sometimes they reject completely what I'm saying, especially when they ask me, "Which church do you fellowship with?" and my answer is, "I don't do church". It's like talking to a Jehovah's Witness."

My Response: Yep, I usually get the same response.

It's impossible to talk to Christians about the Kingdom, unless Father has been drawing them to it. They're identifiable because they'll confess something like, "There's got to be more!"

Others who may be receptive to the message of the Kingdom will be damaged Christians who've left the church system because they can see the falseness of the people or also its religion.

The important thing is to stop wanting to evangelize people. Also, stop wanting to correct everyone.

Both those are strong habits from evangelicalism, but especially if you've been in a CRC (Christian Revival Church)[1] centre for a long time.

Important to remember is that Jesus spoke about the Kingdom to those who came to him and wanted to know more. He only spoke to individuals when the Spirit told him to do it.

That's how I operate.

Father is training us to be like Jesus, our prototype[2]. We're to: love everyone; support those who genuinely need some form of support; be helpful to everyone; don't reject anyone (unless the Spirit directs it); and be available for everyone.

Our King told me he wants a Kingdom Community on every street. That means being involved with the local community – being committed to them. That's how they get to trust us, and eventually what to know more about what motivates us. That's when we have an opportunity to speak about life in the Kingdom.

Father also told me to hang out with like-minded people. That's where we get fellowship and support.

It's a 'lonely road' living as a son. Jesus experienced that. He only had a few very close friends, and that's mainly because of the charisma he had from the Spirit. Most people rejected what he taught or explained.

Our aim is to live in peace and rest, and in oneness with the Trinity. That's what they expect of us. Of course, that also includes listening to what Father has to say to us, as well as the Spirit's prompting.
