

The Age-old Social Science Phenomenon

Social Science is the study of people and societies. In school we often knew it as Geography or Social Studies.

One amazing phenomenon that people everywhere exhibit is the inertia to change. This is sometimes expressed as 'the fear of the unknown'. This idiom also says it: 'Better the devil we know than the devil we don't know'.

A more detailed analysis of this propensity sounds like this:

“When people have largely adopted a way of thinking into their society and slowly built a universal worldview around it, they will not easily receive modifications to that worldview—even when the worldview is based on inaccuracy in the first place. They don’t want to hear the truth, because it means letting go of all they’ve known or believed in up to that point, so they hold on to what’s familiar, what’s comfortable, always referring back to some “they” authority to support them when questioned.”<sup>1</sup>

Why don't people want to leave the comfort of religion for the wonderful life and the benefits of the Kingdom? Go no further than this phenomenon.

It's not just the spirit of religion that blinds their spiritual eyes and works on their minds, but also fear. It's the fear of change. It's also the fear of being out of the will of God because somehow we think he heartily approves of religion.
