

Cease Being Fussy About Your Food

(Received on 15-3-2016)

The following sentence was dropped into my spirit as I was bemoaning the fact that parents these days don't train their children to eat everything they are given. They pander to them and ask them what they want to eat and don't give them anything they refuse to eat. This trains them from an early age to be self-centred and have independence of the rebellious type. I was not looking for a revelation at the time – it came as quite a shock.

“Cease being fussy about your food”

As I received it I checked with my spirit as to its underlying meaning. I received this sense about the message which gives it's wider relevance and meaning.

“Start getting ready for tough times by being content with what you have because you will not have what you desire in the future.”

So, it's not just about food, but about the fussiness in our pampered Western lifestyle, where we want what we want and not what the Lord our King provides for us. It's also a 'knock' for our hedonistic lifestyle.

Laurence Smart
(15-3-2016)