

A Leadership Difficulty – Don't Stick with the 'Pack'

(TV interview with ex Queensland Premier Anna Bligh)

[Her autobiography: "Through the wall : reflections on leadership, love and survival"]

This is the gist (not a quote) of what Anna Bligh revealed¹ concerning what happened at a particular point to herself while she was rising in leadership above her political peers.

When you start rising as a leader your friends and colleagues see you overtake them. They don't know how to relate to you. They may even envy you and be jealous of you. You find it difficult at this point. Some people give up their leadership aspirations at this time because it's more comfortable in 'the pack' with their friends and relations.
