

The Veil That We Have

“This veil is our old religious or DIY belief system that causes a hardened mind...[I]n the church we have been very good at teaching people what to think, but not how to think. Most of us have been taught to conform, either explicitly or implicitly. But conformity to ideology, theology, doctrine and cultural norms actually limits our creative thinking and our sonship. We must turn to the Lord for the veil to be taken away. To turn is to engage metanoia, the word which is normally translated ‘repentance’ but which really means ‘a radical shift of thinking’. We know that the more we try to turn away from something, the more we will focus on the thing we are trying to turn away from. The solution is to turn towards something else instead, and to focus on that. To remove the veils and renew our minds we need to behold God face-to-face, to engage Him heart-to-heart and mind-to-mind, so that we can become like Him. We can do this through meditative encounters. As we open the eyes of our heart, as our imagination is activated, we can begin to see, hear and perceive true reality. Our encounters with God will begin to challenge what we thought we knew about Him.”²
