Wrong policy decisions affect everyone, so why do we keep using theory and models that fail time and again?

Economists have been getting it wrong consistently since the Great Financial Crisis of 2008—and it's affecting everyone.

Why Economists Can't Get It Right

BY VALENTIN SCHMID

January 12, 2017 Updated: January 16, 2017

“Models have been disproven in theory and in practice, and rely on assumptions that don't apply in the real world...And yet, they are still being used by the world's central banks as well as institutions like the IMF and world governments to craft monetary and fiscal policy.”

Silicon Valley Is Building A Chinese-Style Social Credit System

BY: MAC SLAWO/ACTIVISTPOST.COM SEPTEMBER 04, 2015

“Make no mistake, though, the corporations building a social credit system in the U.S. are already another arm of the government. They are lobbying and using the money made to get certain politicians elected.”

Whistleblower: Google Plans to Overthrow the United States

The Dismantling of Reality - LGBTQ Organizations War On Society

BY DENNIS PRAGER/DENNISPRAGER.COM

AUGUST 15, 2019

“LGBTQ organizations care about lesbians, gays, bisexuals and transgenders as much as communists cared about workers. They use them as a cover for their real agenda: dismantling civilization as we know it.”

50 Years After Woodstock: Reflections on the Sexual Revolution

Harley Price

August 13, 2019 Updated: August 13, 2019

“the Sexual Revolution ushered in an era of unprecedented ignorance about the deeper moral and philosophical meaning of human sexuality. Social revolutions are almost always intellectually beggaring in this way, insofar as they require that revolutionary societies unlearn the accumulated moral and social wisdom of the immemorial civilization that preceded them, while rarely knowing how to replace that wisdom with anything wiser.”
