

Learning to Operate as a Son Should Function

[Report #10]

My Conscience Has Been Superseded

I recently discovered through a revelatory moment that I no longer operate with a conscience. This was quite a shock seeing I'd had a very strong conscience from my boyhood.

The background to how this happened relates to my new decision-making process. Knowing that I'm a son with a position of planet manager, a representative of Father and carrying Heaven's authority, I decided to agree with what's been revealed to me and I began operating with my own authority. This related to decision-making so that I took responsibility for myself and stepped out in faith.

As an autonomous decision-maker, knowing my sins are covered under the blood of Jesus, I decided to take NT statements about being able to make statements and requests because Father was my adopted spiritual dad. I took courage in the fact that I know he wants me to extend myself in spiritual matters and begin to operate as a son is supposed to operate in the area of the decisions I made. I knew he forgives my failures, because he values genuine faith, so I had nothing to fear.

After making this decision, I began by making a number of 'rash' choices. I:

- Cancelled one overseas mission financial support – to focus on supporting those in my nation
- Established financial support of a person in Australia who was not well off
- Found tools on the road during my walks – kept some and left others
- Gave away a bike that was given to me – after making an attempt to check with the original owner
- Sent back a supernumerary order I received from The Good Guys
- Didn't send back a supernumerary order I received from eBay
- Returned an incorrectly supplied tarpaulin ordered over the internet – I was given it free instead

All these decision were made without the Spirit's guidance. I made them myself using Heaven's wisdom and by my own recognisances. This is very different to being Spirit-led.

Support for my decision to operate differently came from Mike Parsons¹. He was shown by Father all the choices he could make. Then he made a discovery: "I realised that these were all good and acceptable choices because I was walking with the Father as a son."² Mike went on to say:

"I realised that every choice I'm making whilst walking with him, heart-to-heart with him, are all good. I'm made as a son, I get to choose, I'm creative...God made Adam in his image, and there's some very interesting things when you look at who we're made to be, how we create reality and what we're called to do. So, I'm there, and I'm thinking, 'Wow. It's like every one of these choices is all good? I'm going to have so much fun, 'cause I'm going to be able to create so many things and they're all going to be good. And they're all going to be an expression of my sonship.' Exactly the same applies to every one of you. Everyone of you is created as a son of God, to operate in co-heirship with God, to be creative and to bring things into order. There was no independence in my choice. I was not going to choose according to DIY tree. This was sonship; this was co-heirship; I'm walking with God the Father; I'm not here independently on my own. So I saw all these creative possibilities, and they were all good...I could see that this was going to be positive. So, I thought, right, I'm going to yield everything I possibly could do, to just be who I am in him. So, I'm a son, this is going to release sonship into the Earth. Then I thought, 'I've got the mind of Christ.' Do we not all have the mind of *Christ? What do you think the mind of Christ has the capacity to do? What do you think he did? Creative things?”*³

Wow. We both discovered that Father wants us to be sons who operate in wisdom and take responsibility for the decisions we make. Very different to biblical teaching.

Thinking about why I don't use my conscience any more I made some interesting discoveries. (See my article “What I Discovered About Conscience”⁴ for the full account of what I discovered.)
