

The King's Words to Us are to be Used, not Ignored

When the Spirit speaks to us with a message from our King or from Father, there is a purpose in it. It's not to make us have 'warm & fuzzy' feelings so we get a buzz. These are meant to be life for us and are designed to meet our specific needs. If we don't see this purpose, we're being religious and not living in the reality of the Kingdom as sons.

Whether it's a prophetic word, a download, a revelation, an inspirations, or whatever, they are the Trinity's support for us in a specific way for a specific circumstance. Every one of these need to be appropriated and acted on so our lives can function in partnership with them.

They don't communicate with us for the sake of it. That's how we can ignorantly receive their words to us. This is a childish attitude which is reminiscent of our attitude to parents and teachers in our childhood. I can remember childishly thinking to myself that my teachers and grandmother were speaking irrelevant things to me and wishing they'd stop pestering me and leave me to get on with my life. How ignorant I was.

In a different way we can be just as dismissive. We can be flagrantly ignorant of the words we receive from Heaven – this should not be.

Here's a reminder from our King that his words (plural) to us are for a purpose, and that they are to be used by us for those purposes:

“My beloved, I have given you my words so that you may use them and triumph in every aspect of your life. My words are powerful and alive, able to revive anything in your life that is dead. My words have the power to heal the sickness and disease that afflict the body. My words are full of peace to silence any storm that swirls in the mind. My words are full of light, causing darkness to flee. Use my words.

If you listen to my voice and confidently believe, I promise that my words will come to pass. Feast on my promises.”¹
