

Did You Know?

The Law was Never Meant to be Introduced

The first instructions from God to humanity were those he gave to Adam.

These were guidelines, not laws like the Torah.

The next instructions from God for humanity were the simple Noahide laws.

So why was it necessary to bring in the Law for Israel with its very prescriptive rules?

Why a radical shift from instructions to the Law?

There must have been a reason for it

If the ideal was to have the 'law' written on our hearts, why not go straight there with Israel? Why 1,300-year interlude with the Torah as the standard, and then back to the heart-law?

There must have been a reason for it

In the same way that Jesus never intended for his New Covenant (NC) people to belong to a religion using his title, he never wanted his Old Covenant (OC) people to be in Judaism.

And, in the same way that Jesus never intended for his NC people to be in an organisation, he never intended the Israelites to be under a code of written Law.

- His OC people were to be in personal relationship with him, just like Noah and Enoch were.
- But they lived in a religion, without the relationship that King David and many prophets had.

How are we to understand this dilemma?

Theology and pulpit teaching will not get us to the truth of this because they are rooted in 2,000 years of religion and legalism which masquerade as the complete truth.

The problem is the propensity of people to gravitate towards religion to 'feel' they're doing it right.

This is the work of the enemy through the religious spirit.

e.g.

We already know that Jesus never came to set up a new religion or that his ekklesia was to be an organisation.

- His NC people are to be a 'living' organism of spiritual people.
- But they lived in religion, shutting themselves out from the intimate relationship that they could have lived in.

So, what about his OC people and the Law?

The truth can only be found in two ways:

1. Research the 'seed' of the OC people
2. Ask Father what his intentions were

SEED:

Abraham was justified by his faith.

His obedience was all that was required of him.
