

Restoring Objectivity

One of the biggest problems people face each day is their lack of objectivity. Objectivity in this sense means:

- Dealing with facts or conditions as perceived without distortion by personal feelings, prejudices, or interpretations ¹

Because of fear, anxiety, worry, distress, stress and tension, people find it hard to deal with difficult situations and circumstances. They often run from them, ignore them, or deal with them in an ineffective manner. It's the ability to overcome the negativity and properly deal with what needs to be handled that separates business managers from the general public.

Like excellent business managers, sons are to operate in their kingship role,² which means they deal with issues like a monarch would. That means, they take dominion³ over whatever it is and deal with it like it's insignificant (not really an issue at all). This method of kingly operation needs training because we haven't been raised as princes or princesses who are tutored in ruling their domain with confidence. That training process, under the guidance of our King, will take us years to perfect.

As we go through our training, issues will get 'on top of us', so we need to find a safe place where we can regain our objectivity, strengthen ourselves, and receive wisdom to know what to do. This should be our response, rather than giving in to the enemy's pressure to be negative or become fearful. That locale of refuge is in our King's presence. That's my experience, and that of many, many others. However, it's not something that sons have to discover for ourselves. Here's our King inviting us into his presence to restore our objectivity:

"It is imperative for you to get some relief from stress and tension. Come into My presence where there is no fear or anxiety. It is an atmosphere that is beyond human emotion where you can regain spiritual strength and objectivity." ⁴

It's the plan of the Trinity for us to be one with them⁵ and that we find everything we need in our Internal Kingdom – that's where they reside inside us.

Try it. It's fantastic.
