

We Can Be Extraordinary

As we move further into the glorious manifestation of Father's sons to the peoples of the Earth, we must change our thinking if we are to align with his plans. To that end, we must stop 'thinking small' about ourselves. If we don't, we won't allow the Spirit to make changes inside us and direct us to step out into the miraculous. This is not an admonition to be prideful, but to know who we really are and operate as sons of the Most High God. Our status is really phenomenal.

Religion has trained us to be Christians, but we aren't that at all. Shifting out of a man-made organisation into the freedom of Kingdom sonship has the above implications for us that we haven't been fully aware of. Either that, or we've become complacent in our freedom and don't want to progress any further, despite the Spirit's gentle tugging. To get us focusing rightly, we need to remind ourselves that we've been instructed that Jesus of Nazareth is our prototype on which we are to model ourselves.¹ Actually, to allow ourselves to be modelled on him.

Can you imagine operating in life like him? Well, that's who we're meant to be like, but in the 21st century.

Truly, we don't think big enough about ourselves because religion and society has molded us into a "cardboard replica"² of who we're intended to be. I reiterate, that statement isn't prideful thinking. It's actually like a child thinking how wonderful it will be when they grow up and can do everything they were born to do as an adult. Get the picture?

Here's instructions from our King to help us head in that direction in our thinking and activities:

"Refuse to allow disappointment to cause you to give up. You are not finished by any means. Strengthen your resolve and arise from the proverbial dead ashes of the past to fulfill your destiny in My Kingdom. Remember that discouragement kills faith. Reset your heart and mind to believe that by My Spirit you can be extraordinary."

It'll take a great deal of faith to want to grow up in the Kingdom and become mature sons who can be trusted as Jesus of Nazareth was. But, that's been our destiny right from the very start, right back in the 1st century.

REMEMBER: We've been created with autonomy, as beings made in Father's image. That's why we can refuse to grow and develop as sons, and not allow him to raise us up to be extraordinary people. He won't over-ride our decision in that matter (or any other matter).
