

Business in the Kingdom is Serving Others Not Gaining Wealth

- Many Christians tend to approach business for a soulish perspective. That means they engage business from their own governmental position and undertake it from their own understanding.
- In the big picture, making money in business has no eternal value (no Kingdom value).
- Business in the world sense is about making money which is the wrong perspective, because it's role should be to serve others.
- Whatever the type of business, it should be to bless others, even though they may pay for your goods and services.
- Our attitude should be, "I'm investing in this business to bless people".
- The blessing is always more than the goods and services they're purchasing.
- Business should be seen from a wellbeing perspective, not from a financial perspective.
- Finance controls the world system which is different to the Kingdom, because God didn't create finances to function in a garden environment. Activity was originally all concerned with covenant blessing.
- Covenant is for mutual blessing, not benefiting one person more than another. The basis of covenant is, "what's mine is yours and what's yours is mine".
- Businesses are non-relational because they're all about profit, which can be at the expense of relationship and serving.
- Mike hasn't seen business platforms in Heaven or anything like it.
- Seeing some people as financial pillars of the Kingdom is an old way of thinking which we need to get rid of.
- We need to know how to release the resources of Heaven and to use them for Kingdom purposes which is to bless.
- Love must be at the heart of business.
- Our business attitude must be to serve clients not take their money.
- Money then is a side benefit, not the motivation.
- With that attitude you'll treat people in your business differently.
- Your employees are there to serve and bless others, they're not there to be exploited or to make money for you.
- Kingdom is not business. Kingdom is government.
- We need to differentiate between what we do from an earthly perspective and what we do from a heavenly governmental perspective.
- All business should run this way. There's no need for them all to be Christian ministries.
- Running a business as a vocation, rather than a moneymaking enterprise, will change the way we interact with people.
- People operate in mixture when they run a business in an earthly way and want Heaven's release. That's a lack of purity.
- It's up to each of us to evaluate and discern the motivation of a company we are dealing with to see if it's basis is profit or wellbeing.

- Our future as we operate in the Kingdom must be a wellbeing economy, not a financial one, to ensure everyone is fulfilled and living a most happy and contented life.
- Whether we're producing or serving others, everything should be based around a covenantal perspective, not competition.
- The competition business model produces conflict in society, as does trade wars between nations.
- Competition is a self-centred way of doing business because profit is the motivation, not service and blessing.
- Running business without competition allows us to operate in tune with creation so we don't treat it badly.
- Kingdom doesn't operate out of the Tree of Knowledge like the world does.
- Jesus demonstrated servant-hearted operation which reflects Father's heart.
- Business could follow suit and pay every worker the same wage or salary. Business would then thrive because everyone felt valued and the finance attitudes would be on the right track.
- Businesses giving away more than they keep is also a Kingdom way of operating.
- Pyramid marketing doesn't align with the Kingdom because individual returns are not equitable. The motivation to operate in them is about being driven to sell, which is pressure, not rest.
- Businesses should sell to people what they need, not sell to make money when the buyer has no real need for the product.
- It's all about the heart.
- Business openers should serve their workers as well as their clients and customers.
- Workers' attitudes needs to change from working so they can live, to serving the business owner and the clients and customers. This should automatically flow out of our intimate relationship with the trinity.
- We aren't to go through the motions of working, but to do our best in love and relationship.
- We shouldn't take advantage of people or of time, and honouring others correctly in how we do things.
- Everything we do is for Father, so it should reflect his heart and attitudes.
