

Don't Give Way To Conjecture

Conjecture is speculating, hypothesising and making suppositions. It's trying to work things out in our mind using a mixture of logic and what-ifs. It usually goes round-&-round in our mind, wasting our time and energy.

Conjecture is most often connected to worrying because our surmising wants to work out a self-beneficial solution to a situation or a circumstance that concerns us. Conjecture is also connected to fear, because worry is all about the fear of consequences or the future.

We already know that fear and worry (anxiety/vexation) are not Kingdom ways of functioning, therefore, we shouldn't be involved in either of them. However, because we haven't got to the point of unifying our mind, soul and spirit,¹ our emotions (soul) or our mind usually has control of our being.

Perhaps it would be beneficial to hear what Father has to say about conjecturing so we can finally give up doing it all the time:

“You can get overwhelmed when you look too far ahead of where you are. That is when you start to worry and give way to conjecture. Refuse to allow theory without proof to become part of your decision making process. Take each moment as it comes, and allow Me to direct your steps and give you the wisdom you need as you progress, says the Lord.”²

IMPORTANT: The sooner we can get to be fully unified in our being, through the assistance of the Trinity, the sooner we'll be able to function the way sons were created to function. That process is just as important to make progress with, as it is to be in full unity and alignment with them.
