

Engaging Others Through Their Spirit

important teaching

There's a great deal we have to learn so we can function in the way sons are meant to function in the Kingdom, right now. I'm speaking of things that even forerunners don't know yet. We only know a skerrick of what's needed to function as we were created to function, so it's important that we listen and implement what we hear from Father, ASAP. That's the only way we'll speed up our spiritual maturity and be more effective in our Kingdom assignments.

Being able to connect spirit-to-spirit with other people is one such ability that we need to take on-board and learn to master. Engaging with others that way is essential to bypass their mind and their soul, which are the two components of their being which prevent Holy Spirit from communicating with us.

Connecting spirit-to-spirit is a technique that should be normal for sons. It shouldn't be seen as an add-on or as something airy-fairy that only 'spiritual' people do. It should be normal, because sons already have that ability built into them, and can learn to operate with it in everyday life. Jesus connected that way, although there's no biblical statement to justify my claim. I know he did, because he was able to impact them without having to spend copious amounts of time teaching them, which is the method we use to connect with others about the Kingdom these days. Think of Zacchaeus. Jesus walked under the tree he had climbed up, and wham-o, he was a changed man (by demonstration) without getting a lecture from Jesus.

For years now, I have a preference to teach by speaking into people's spirits. I discovered years ago, that it's the most effective way to impact others with Kingdom teaching. I know when it's happening, because I feel it in my spirit, and I can see them fully engaged. That's why I always preface my lectures with advice to be focused and not distracted – especially preventing questions from coming into the mind because what I've say can 'assault' a person's theology.

In addition, I had dropped into my spirit many years ago that we should be able to communicate with other sons, spirit-to-spirit, over long distances. I tried it with some in our prophetic team,¹ but we weren't able to have any success. I assumed at the time that the failure was due to our focus on daily living, rather than living out of our spirits.

A few people have begun teaching in this area. One is Mike Parsons who was schooled by Father in this ability, particularly in respect to having the type of marriage that we're meant to have.² Mike stated recently:

*"I think that's what we can begin to do by engaging their spirit directly. [For example:] Arthur Burt – there's a whole book about speaking to the human spirit. I think we can engage these people's spirit by not trying to engage their soul. Because when we're trying to engage their soul we're trying to convince them by reason or logic or testimony or whatever. But we're trying to convince them of something being true by giving them evidence or giving them our own testimony of our encounters with God or anything else. If we engage their spirit directly, spirit-to-spirit, I think we can begin to inspire their spirit to begin to engage their own soul and begin to draw the soul towards a pursuit of God and relationship. So, I do call people's spirit to attention, to hear and to engage, and to rise up and to begin to grow and to connect the right way. I think we can definitely do that."*³

Mike also sees its use in bringing others into the Kingdom (evangelism). The basis, he teaches, is that before you know Christ, your spirit's already alive and connected to God, it's recognising him that's the problem that people have:

“When Jesus breathed into the disciples the Holy Spirit, effectively, Jesus is in us. So when Paul met God on the Damascus Road in the light, he described that in Galatians as, “The Father was pleased to reveal his son in me.” So he connected with Jesus in him, not outside of him. Jesus was at work in the spirit all the time to try and reveal himself to Paul, and Paul was adamantly resisting and doing his own thing, in religion. But he was working in him and then he gave him that message to go and preach Christ in the Gentiles – “go and tell everyone that I'm already in them at work. Let me out. Open your heart to me (in a sense), I'm already within in that spiritual dimension in you, but I want you to willingly surrender your whole being to me.” Which is what Paul did, once he recognized that.”⁴

Baxter Kruger goes further on the topic of connecting with Jesus and states that we were united with Jesus as our federal head before the foundation of the world, and it was accomplished and worked out in the Incarnation. The step each of us takes is realizing that our identity is bound up in him 2,000 years ago, and “that's backed up all the way to eternity”.⁵

The other person I want to reference is Arthur Burt, who Mike Parsons referred to. Here's some of his material you can read for yourself.
