

Let Go of Control

To walk in more faith, we need to trust the Trinity more. To walk in higher levels of trust requires us to let go of controlling our lives and surrendering¹ to them, so they have the supreme oversight.²

That's my testimony³ from learning to ultimately trust them with my life, over the past 5-10 years. Complete surrender occurred somewhere near the beginning, but I don't think it was the catalyst for my journey of trust. I think it was my desire that precipitated my quest and the surrender came after a particular event in my life.

It's hard to let go of control. It's as hard as leaving the safety of an aeroplane to skydive. Control is what we like to have because it helps keep our lives out of chaos. However, the Trinity does a better job at steering us through life's difficulties than we could ever do.

Letting go of control is actually an instruction from Father, not a theology or philosophy. Here's his latest statement on that:

"I want you to be honest with yourself about how much you trust me. If you say you trust me and then follow it up with a sigh or walk around with heaviness, it's a good indication that you're not trusting me. I don't want you to feel guilty about your lack of faith, but I do need you to invite me into that fear and disbelief. I want you to walk in a higher dimension of trust. That means you must let go of control."⁴

Let that soak in.
