NET-ZERO EXPOSÉ (December 2023)

- ★ “Climate Change Authority Says Farmers Being Pressured to Up Emissions Reporting”
“Economic infrastructure demands large greenhouse gas emitters in agriculture to measure on-farm emissions actively, a report has found. The Climate Change Authority released its latest report with 25 recommendations to enhance crucial programs (National Greenhouse and Energy Reporting (NGER) Act and the Australian Carbon Credit Unit (ACCU)) that measure, report, and reduce emissions. The authority CEO, Brad Archer, explained markets, financial institutions, and supply chains want big emitters in agriculture to report their emissions accurately and transparently, such as by emission (pdf).”

- “Biden's Move to Put Kill Switches in Cars Tied to Global Agenda”
“All new cars in the United States will be required to install “kill switches” by 2026. These were mandated in a recent infrastructure bill, allegedly to stop drunk drivers. But concerns are going around that it may lead to government abuse, especially as organizations including the World Economic Forum are trying to advance an agenda against cars overall.”

- “Energy Boss Says More Coal Power Reserves Needed to Prevent Blackouts”
“The boss of one of Australia’s largest energy retailers has called on state governments to build up coal generation reserves to prevent energy shortfalls from the rapid net zero transition. This comes after the Australian Energy Market Operator (AEMO) released a new 2024 roadmap predicting that all coal-fired power stations across the country could cease operation by 2038, five years ahead of the previous forecast.”

- “Critics Respond to UN Climate Deal to Phase Out Fossil Fuels: ‘Soviet-Style Central Planning’” “Governments from around the world agreed to a global transition away from “fossil fuels,” greater limits on energy use, and a new fund to compensate governments of poorer nations for alleged damages caused by CO2 emissions from wealthier countries... Critics, however, are sounding the alarm, saying the agreement and the broader process threaten both prosperity and liberty while doing little to nothing for the environment. Climate Depot editor Marc Morano, a former U.S. Senate aide who has long worked on climate policy, said Republican leaders in Congress must push back against the agenda. “This is Soviet-style central planning that simply must be stopped,” he told The Epoch Times.”

- “Seizing Private Land Is Next Step in Fight Against Climate Change”

“Eminent domain is becoming the weapon of choice against opposition to large wind and solar projects being planned and constructed around the United States.

*The dream of net-zero carbon emissions—and its vision of blanketing hundreds of millions of acres of American land with wind turbines and solar panels—is running up against the reality that most of the land in America is still privately owned and many Americans don't want these massive industrial installations near their homes. But that may prove to be a temporary impediment. “There is a major effort under the Biden administration to consolidate power over land and resources, because whoever owns the land and resources of a nation, controls the people,” Margaret Byfield, executive director of American Stewards of Liberty, a property rights nonprofit, told The Epoch Times.”*
