

Stay Within Your Rightful Boundaries

I have been deeply disturbed for many years now concerning the bad habit of believers usurping authority and operating where they have no business to function. I see it in church fellowships, in families, at work and definitely in society.

The concern that it raises for me comes from the negative outcomes that eventuate when a person steps outside of their bounds of authority. Self-centred, they initiate forays into other people's arenas for their own purposes, and they reap the downside of their efforts. Mostly, however, they do it out of spiritual ignorance, and others suffer the consequences as well, as well as them.

I've been raising a warning about this for a long time, especially since I began my series on Spiritual Authority¹ in mid 2017. Since then, from my observations, there's not been much improvement, so this article is another attempt to wake people up.²

The reason this being a big issue is that the spirit realm runs on spiritual authority, therefore we must submit to the authority that's rightfully ours as we operate spiritually.³

In addition, as imagers of the Trinity, we were created to be in charge of Earth, a right that was ceded to Nachash (the enemy) at The Fall.⁴ With the reversal of the effects of The Fall with Jesus' death, resurrection and ascension,⁵ sons are now back where Adam was originally (minus the Edenic garden). That means our operation in spiritual matters is of constant consternation to Satan, so he's always looking to 'back-hand us' when we step outside of our authority, and therefore, into his domain of authority⁶.

On top of that, as imagers, the Trinity put the protocol in place at creation, that they work primarily through humans on the Earth, because they installed us as managers of the planet. That goes for every human, and that hasn't changed. Therefore, when we step outside of our authority, we allow the enemy to have his way because we are ignorant of the way the Kingdom and the spirit realm operates. We overstep the mark quite often this way, while we're operating in the natural during daily life, as opposed to when it occurs during our spiritual activity.

With these 3 facets of our humanity operating all the time, we constantly have negative repercussions when we don't stick to what's rightfully ours and what we have rightful authority over. There is more on this topic, but suffice to say, there's enough written here to keep all of us occupied with maintaining proper boundaries, without adding any more to what we need to oversee.

As an added instruction to keep within our authorized boundaries, Father has released yet another message to remind us, so we can keep ourselves out of unwarranted trouble:

“Refuse to worry about people and things that you have no responsibility for or control over. You have enough to attend to where you do have authority without reaching beyond your rightful limits. Release yourself from any liability that is not rightfully yours and stay within the limitations of what you are in charge of.”⁷

6 – NOTE: Satan is still functioning, even though Jesus took back his crown of rulership. He has a function, otherwise he would have been eliminated from our realm.

What more needs to be said on this, when a download from Heaven provides instructions that should be complied with.

For further assistance, read through my series on Spiritual Authority – and do it again. Everyone needs to be functioning appropriately in authority, for their own safety and that of those they watch over.

NOTE: The above message is a prophetic inspiration distributed from the one who received it. There was no need for them to say/write, “The Lord says...”, “...says the Lord”, etc. in its content. When we receive what the Spirit has downloaded to us, no qualification is required. It’s the duty and responsibility of the hearer or reader to discern the veracity of the message. I have written on this in more detail recently.⁸
