

The Uneasiness Of The Current Transitioning

In recent weeks, I've felt the uneasiness of the transformation processes that I've been going through. These have been very essential as Father needs to change me and get me to the point where he wants me to be, for sometime in the future. I've asked him to do this changing, and I constantly handle the chagrin¹ of each process as it exposes attitudes and thought patterns in me.

Some of you may be feeling it too, so I'll provide some encouragement in the remainder of this article. That's needed so you "stay the course", as Father told me recently.² It's important that we go through the processes of refinement and learn to enjoy the process. It's only through these that we become more the person he wants us to be as he cleans out of us the rubbish we've picked up from life and from society.

Here's what's going on:

"There is a divine setup right now and you may be experiencing the pain of transition because you aren't understanding how much is about to change in your life. Maybe your job is no longer a passion place, maybe you are moving, maybe God is bringing you through a process that you wouldn't have chosen yourself but you are in the middle of obedience without the fruit of it yet.

Keep going! Keep trusting!

Globally, God is setting His people in place to checkmate the enemy in industries, regions, positions and influence. He has given you promises and destiny over your life, and He is about to activate them...

You personally might be in transition to carry more of God's influence and glory.

As this transition unfolds, do not fear or worry, for the Lord is with you. He will guide you through the uncertainties of change and lead you into a new season of growth and expansion. It is time to prepare your hearts and minds for what is to come.

Do not hold onto the past or cling to what has been comfortable. Instead, embrace the newness of what God is doing and seek His direction for the future. Remember that He is the one who holds all power and authority, and He will equip those who are faithful to Him."³

There are different periods within our transformation process, and none of them are exactly the same. Some periods are wilderness times where he wants us to rest and recuperate as we learn to trust him more.

"You are in an in-between stage of life when things are not the same as they were and you do not know what the future holds. Go with the flow of transition as you trust Me to reveal things left undone and to give you hope for the days ahead. Face each new day with confidence that I know the beginning and the end, and I will lead, guide, direct and protect you, says the Lord."⁴

Whatever the type of experiences we're going through, it's important to be thankful and rejoice, so we maintain our joy and peace. That includes dry, wilderness times:

"Make this a time of rejoicing. Bring to remembrance all that I have done on your behalf. And, be glad for what I will do if you ask in faith without doubting. I have made a way for you in times of despair and in your wilderness experiences. Even though you have endured times of darkness, light will shine again in your heart and life', says the Lord. "Draw close to Me."⁵

One of the rewards of our transformation is maturing spiritually and maturing in our sonship. That means more revelation will be available for us, plus more clarity of the Kingdom and our function in it.

“You are in a season of preparing the ground of your heart to receive greater spiritual revelation. You must internalize that truth. Receive it in the good ground of your heart with faith and understanding that it will take root, grow, and produce a harvest.”⁶

NOTE: ‘Harvest’ there is referring to the ‘fruit’ in our lives that comes from the benefits of Father’s pruning.
