

Time to Take My Head Completely Out of the Bible

Last week I had a groaning in my spirit which I quickly identified as the religious pressure I'd been under in the past to use the Bible to determine or prove doctrine (teaching). Father had already told me back in 2018 not to use the Bible as my source of knowledge, which I complied with at that time and have been doing so ever since. Here's what he said:

“Learn from me. Learn with me. Learn through me, not your own mental capacity and reasoning. To completely renew your mind I need your submission to my processes. Nothing can occur until you do. Leave being in control. Leave looking at your research and teaching ability and learn from me – me only. Not even the Bible has everything I want you to know. Learn from me, not “of” me. Yes, that’s crucial. I’ve been your tutor for many years now, but there’s still much to learn. Much you need to be reprogrammed in and much knowledge of the spirit realm and your role in my Kingdom. So, make a change today. Make it a day you will mark and remember – a turning point, not a normal day.”<sup>1</sup>

I'd been freed from “The Word” in the form of a book, and had been freely documenting what I heard in my spirit from ‘The Word’ himself, what messages others had received and what I read that witnessed in my spirit as Kingdom reality. What I was feeling this morning, then, was the unjustified weight that religion had placed on others, not myself. I was feeling for believers all over the world who were under the false impression that sola scriptura<sup>2</sup> was the way Father wanted them to gain spiritual knowledge and understanding. That was an unusual experience for me, one I'd never had before. So, now, I continue on, spreading the messages that Father gives me through my teaching, website articles and CCOP prophetic messages.

However, since being instructed to leave the Bible as my source of knowledge, I've still continued to use it as a reference in documents that were designed to bring an understanding of it's content from the Kingdom's perspective – i.e. Father's perspective. I've done that in my “A Different Take”<sup>3</sup> series and in my “Kingdom Perspective”<sup>4</sup> series. As I've worked on these documents, it has been increasingly ‘brought home’ to me just how much religion determines our interpretation the Bible. In the evangelical system, including the Charismatic and Pentecostal systems, where I've been, I was taught to take the Bible at face value and not try to interpret it. That, I now know was a HUGE mistake to have complied with.

In reality, Jesus came to reintroduce the Kingdom to all of humanity, just as it originally was. His work included the cancellation of the effects of The Fall and the return of humanity to their Adamic role as planet-managers and Kingdom-spreaders.

Note what Jesus never came to do:

- ◆ He never came to bring a new religion called Christianity. He knew that religion cut people out of the Kingdom, so he never ever encouraged his disciples or his listeners to go in that direction.
- ◆ He never came to create an organisation of people called the church. He described his people using the ANE<sup>5</sup> term of ekklesia<sup>6</sup> a designation of elders who had authority in the city they lived in.
- ◆ He never came to bring a new holy book called the Bible. He said that he was The Truth and that Holy Spirit would provide us with the truth we needed, not a set of holy scriptures.

I know all this is heretical, but it's not when viewed from Kingdom reality. It is heretical from Christianity's perspective, but NT 'heresy' actually meant splitting the ekklesia with beliefs (both good and bad ones).<sup>7</sup> We have the liberty to believe differently to others, without being excommunicated or shunned, despite the NT injunctions to shut others out of community. Our response is to lovingly talk through differences, if necessary, using Kingdom and spiritual reality.

So, it's time to completely take my 'head out'<sup>8</sup> of the Bible. I'm now only going to refer to it very, very sparingly, and only when absolutely necessary in selected documents. I'm not going to fear being excommunicated or shunned as a 'heretic' any more. I'm only going to listen to what the members of the Trinity communicate to me and what they confirm are accurate messages that they've given to others. I'm going to continue to ask Father questions when I need clarification, understanding or knowledge, rather than wait for him to explain or expand on topics.

If my decisions cause me to become more and more isolated by believers, so be it. My identity as a son, my life and existence, and the supply of all my personal needs, come from my intimate relationship and oneness with the Trinity – nowhere else.

IMPORTANT: Check out what things ARE important to Father in the message I received from him recently: HERE.
