- “Men and masculinities in times of crisis: between care and protection”

“Associating crisis with the notion of masculinity is usually a tricky business. For many years in the discussions, not only in the media but also in scholarly debate, about the condition of masculinity and the position of men in the society, a so-called ‘crisis of masculinity’ has been evoked.

Supporters of this particular approach claimed that for certain societal, cultural and political reasons, masculinity (and men) was in crisis, which carried the assumption that this was a negative phenomenon. Such discourses intensified the most when particular societal changes contravened the patriarchal order and the levels of the emancipation of women (and non-heterosexual persons) increased.”

- “Educators using far-left ideology to ‘indoctrinate’ children”

“American Culture Project Senior Fellow Corey DeAngelis discusses educators using far-left ideology to “indoctrinate” children. “There’s actually a nationwide survey that came out earlier this year in the United States showing that about 36 per cent of students reported that their teachers reported often or almost daily that America is a fundamentally racist nation,” Mr DeAngelis told Sky News host Rita Panahi. “It’s pretty crazy you have this going on at the higher education level but it’s also going on at the K-12 level.””

- “Daycares stoking racial division”

“Kids who were born less than five years ago shouldn’t be made to feel like they don’t belong in their own country. Activist ideas about “traditional owners” and “stolen land” should simply not be a priority for kids in daycare. But the relentless intrusion of left-wing Australia-hating activism has now reached into childcare centres.”

- NZ: “Government calls time on open-plan classrooms”

“The Government has put an end to building open-plan classrooms, ensuring all new classrooms are designed in a flexible way to ensure better student outcomes. “Overwhelming feedback I’ve received from schools across New Zealand is open-plan classrooms aren’t meeting the needs of students. While open-plan designs were originally intended to foster collaboration, they have often created challenges for schools, particularly around noise and managing student behaviour,” Education Minister Erica Stanford says.”

- “How we are winning the culture wars!” [The Mainstream S1E3]
“The Institute of Public Affairs’ Daniel Wild and John Roskam discuss the latest developments in the debate about net zero with Nationals MP Barnaby Joyce set to introduce a Private Members Bill into federal parliament calling for the abolition of net zero. Dan and John as discuss the declining study of history at Australian universities which is being replaced by a surge of enthusiasm among young Australians for alternative forms of education and information; the utter failure of big business in their capacity to lead debate in Australia; and the long and often indirect path toward achieving important political culture victories for the mainstream. Plus, Dan and John share their highlights of the past week!”

- “Not surprising’: Douglas Murray reacts to girl punished for wearing Union Jack dress”
“Author Douglas Murray says people in the West are allowed to celebrate every culture “other than your own”. “This is such a delicate era, that you are damned if you do and you are damned if you don’t,” Mr Murray told Sky News host Rita Panahi. “It’s not surprising that a child might tread on the wrong tracks on this because, after all, who knows what the rules are meant to be these days?””

- “Childhood Climate Anxiety is destroying a generation of young Australians”
Following the release of the Institute of Public Affairs’ landmark research report, Climate Change Anxiety in Pre-Adolescent Children: A Neuroscientific and Psychological Perspective, educational psychologist and IPA Adjunct Fellow, Clare Rowe, sat down with the IPA’s Deborah Henderson and Colleen Harkin to discuss her findings. The alarmist environmental messaging spread in schools is causing an epidemic of climate anxiety that is creating a generation of psychologically paralysed young Australians. Listen to Clare’s experience as a clinician where children as young as five are experiencing fear, hopelessness, and a sense of impending doom related to what they are taught at school about climate change is alarming. Australian parents need to understand the psychological burden being placed on their children and the IPA’s research makes clear that climate change education, as currently designed within the National Curriculum, is developmentally inappropriate.”

- “Billboard Chris' slams ‘quasi-religious’ trans agenda”
“Billboard Chris’ Chris Elston claims the transgender community has become “successful” in “conflating trans with gay” - but he argues there is a difference between the two. “This is a quasi-religious movement teaching that we all have a gender identity, and sometimes our gender identity is different than our sex,” he said. “There’s no such thing as a transgender child.””

- “Family First push to repeal anti-free speech laws after injustice to Dr Jereth Kok”
“Family First has slammed the Victorian Civil and Administrative Tribunal (VCAT) decision to uphold the suspension of Christian GP Dr Jereth Kok, calling it a gross injustice and a chilling attack on freedom of speech. The party will fight to repeal similar anti-free speech laws in all states starting with fielding candidates at up-coming elections in South Australia, Victoria and New South Wales. “Dr Kok has harmed no patient. His only ‘crime’ was to express his views online — many of them satirical or Christian in nature — and for that, he has been punished with the loss of his medical career,” said Family First’s National Director Lyle Shelton. “This is not justice, it is un-

Australian. This is Victoria's 'ministry of truth' enforcing ideological conformity and crushing dissent. ””
